AFTERNOON FROCK OF TAFFETA

Soldier blue is one of the new shades, and a generally becoming one, and it is from taffeta in this tint that the frock pictured was fashioned. The skirt consists of three circular flounces, with embroidery inset between each flounce. The simple blouse with set-in sleeves is finished with a belt which closes at the side with a buckle in blue and dull gold. The standing collar fastens beneath a rose.

which was cleared will go toward the expenses of the association this coming year.

A country dance, fortune tellers' dance, and "Fun and Judy" show furnished entertainment for the evening, while the afternoon crowd patronized the flower, candy, toy and fancy work booths.

HOROSCOPE.

"The stars in-line, but do not compel." Tuesday, August 15, 1916.

This is a fairly lucky day, according to astrology. In the evening Saturn rules strongly for good. Neptune and Jupiter are slightly adverse.

It should be a particularly fortunate time for agriculturists and great gain is presaged for them.

All the signs appear to indicate a rise in leather goods. Shoes will be exceedingly costly. If the stars are read aright, the planetary influences interpreted as likely to influence women to commit follies of all sorts, continue more or less strong. Inconsistencies and exaggerations in dress are held to be symbolic of mental tendencies toward various silly actions.

Women have the prognostication of extremes of heroism and efficiency, courage and self-denial, which will write many a thrilling page in history.

Mexico has a way of the stars presaging a campaign of education, which will mark a new era. A great altruist will rise to lead the nation, it is prophesied.

Sensational discussions and exposures of certain tendencies toward the deterioration among Americans are foretold.

Landlords and real estate dealers should benefit especially from the configuration today.

The stars favor concentration and organization. It is a fortunate away for executive work.

Under this direction thoughtful judicial opinions are supposed to be encouraged. It is most helpful for diplomacy.

Neptune gives warning again of the importance of absolute cleanliness. Cities should safeguard health, as the planets indicate much breeding of disease germs, especially those affecting women and children.

Persons whose birthdate it is should use their money carefully during the coming year. With care business should prosper.

Children born on this day may work hard for a living. These subjects of Leo have much personal magnetism usually and are likely to be steadfast in love.

STAG PARTY FOR NONCOMS.

Girls to Be Barred from Camp Ordway Affair.

The noncommissioned officers of the Third Infantry at Camp Ordway will give a stag party tonight at the Administration Building, Fort Myer. Girls will be barred absolutely.

Regimental Supply Sergeant Benjamin H. Streets, president of the Noncommissioned Officers' Association, is in charge of arrangements.

The Machine Gun Company with a band of musicians will entertain, among other local artists, Serst, Milo Atkinson, of Company D, will do sharp-shooting stunts, and will tell stories.

Officers of the militia and of the regular cavalry at Fort Myer will give a farewell dance at the Administration Building tomorrow night.

KEITH'S PROGRAM ABOVE STANDARD

Midsummer Dream of Music and Laughter and Pretty Girls.

Completely undaunted by the traditional lassitude of midsummer theatricals, the offering at Keith's this week maintains the splendid standard set by the previous bills of the summer season. There is music and dancing in abundance, blended with humorous and artistic talent presented in novel fashion. Particular interest of course attaches to the appearance of that distinguished dramatic star, Laura Hope Crews, in vaudeville for the first time before a Washington audience. "Her Husband's Wife," a condensed version, by Edgar Allan Woolf, of the comedy by A. E. Thomas, is the vehicle which exploits Miss Crews' delightful talents in her vaudeville venture. In the original play Miss Crews shared starring honors with Henry Miller, and her interpretation has lost none of its charm in the limitations of the condensed role.

The story of the piece concerns the naive arrangement of a young wife, who is a hypochondriac, to provide her husband with a suitable helpmeet in the event of her death. The young woman selected as her successor, by reason of her wren-like character, suddenly develops bird of paradise tendencies which complicate matters mightily and bring about the ultimate recovery of the wife. Miss Crews plays the capricious wife and brings to her impersonation her own whimsical charm and perfect conception of dramatic values. She has competent support from a company which includes Edwin Morand, Ronald Byram, Florence Short, and Pirie Bush. An added bit of interest, which draws the attention of loyal playgoers to the piece, is the presence in the cast of Harriet Fitzjames, a former Washington society girl and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Pitts, who is pleasing in a minor role.

Ben Deely and Lillian Steele in "The New Bell Boy" furnish a deal of mirth and music and the Crispe, billed as the "Two Tom Boys," contribute a novel and lively fifteen minutes. A whistling, talking, and singing act with Adeloida, a comedy by immensely diverting, her "Belay at the Movies" proving particularly clever. The three Natalie sisters offer high-class musical selections which are all the more delightful for the beauty of the artists.

Willie Solar, late of the London Hippodrome, has a novel singing and dancing offering and the "Follies d'Amour," presented by Rolfe and Maddox, are most exquisite living pictures, mounted in a plot of color and very artfully executed. Paul Le Varr and his brood present a series of marvelous gymnastic feats, staged in a drawing room setting and executed in conventional attire.

Supplementing these come Harry Chick, Bert Hunter, Fernand de Porcy and Chick Hunter, as "The Four Cut Ups," in a fine song offering, including the tenor aria from "La Traviata," harmony bellows and a plantation selection that won big applause; Jack Arnold and Henry White, in a very good comedy sketch, including a song and dance number, violin solos and cornet and trombone duets, with Billy Davis, a blackface comedian, in a funny monologue and new songs.

The added attractions include the Sell Tribune news pictures, a "Miss Nanny" funny cartoon, a close view of the reptiles on the Mexican border and the big photograph, "The Spell of the Yukon," with Edmund Reese as the picture star, shown only during matinee hours, beginning at 12:30 p. m.

Moore's Garden—Feature Films.

With two such film stars as Charles Chaplin and Gertrude McCoy gracing the screen, it was no wonder that standing room was at a premium yesterday at Moore's Garden Theater. Chaplin, in a new comedy picture, "The Circus," has a camera comedy, but in "One A. M." he sets himself a new record, and for fully one-half hour he kept everyone convulsed with laughter.

The efforts of the picture stars to reach his domicile in the wee small hours of the morning. He has a most hazardous journey in a bumpy taxi and after reaching home he can find neither latch-key nor keyhole. He is obliged to enter the living room via a friendly window and then his real difficulties begin. A mysterious revolving table greatly confuses him; he combats with numerous stuffed animals scattered about the room and makes several ineffectual efforts to reach the second floor. Once there, his troubles start all over again. He wages a merry little war with a baffling folding bed which seems to be more human than any piece of furniture. In despair he finally renounces the bed and seeks rest in the bathtub.

Gertrude McCoy, the other star of the program, was seen to advantage in "The Gates of Divorce," a novel photographic creation explaining a new angle to the divorce question. These pictures will hold the screen until Wednesday inclusive.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Billie Burke will present "A Murderer at Bay," an exciting chapter of "Gloria's Romance," by Rupert Hughes. On Thursday and Friday the program will be further augmented by Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in "A Man for All That," a comedy drama. The bill on those days will further include the erstwhile comic opera star, Frank Daniels, in a merry farce, "Col. Nutt's High Shoes."

Moore's Strand—Feature Films.

Frank Keenan and Enid Markey, who have won such high honors in filmland, drew crowds to Moore's Strand Theater yesterday, where they headed the double feature program in a new and exciting detective story, "The Phantom." It proved to be a novel "crook" play. The "phantom" is the sobriquet of Farrell, a most elusive character, who, through love of a young girl, gives up his nefarious profession and by sheer bravery, single-handed, saves the girl's father from a band of crooks. Mr. Keenan in his "Raffles-like" role acts his character with all his accustomed ability and finesse and Miss Markey wins fresh laurels as the rich society girl who succeeds in reforming "the phantom."

The imitable Douglas Fairbanks, with his breezy personality and winning smile, fairly divided honors with Mr. Keenan and Miss Markey in a clever comedy, entitled "The Mystery of the Leaping Fish." It pictures in a most amusing manner the many difficulties besetting an amateur angler in his efforts to whip a trout stream. These two pictures will continue to hold the screen until Tuesday inclusive.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday

Glen Echo Park.

Maybe going to Glen Echo Park has become a habit with a good big majority of Washington folks, which might account for the fact that during the unusually cool weather of the last few days the attendance at the popular resort has maintained mid-August proportions, which translated means that thousands nightly through the grounds. Last evening was no exception and from dusk until the early arrivals had started home, every car unloaded a full quota of passengers at the Glen Echo entrance.

The dancing contingent that comes out about the weather was out in force and "Charlie" Mills' men played to a full house every time they swung into a fresh number. Last evening's crowd was looking for amusement with the result that things were kept humming.

Out in front of the derby a line was always waiting for a turn at the thrilling race over the eight dips and at the coaster, midway, carousel and other fun providers the same condition existed. Along the "crow" where the "barkers" hold forth, and "Jacks" spiel is heard scores jostled each other and only the confetti was lacking to make it seem a carnival.

An unusually good free "movie show" with first-time films started the fun for the crowd last evening and all the evening the "hot dog" vender was a live competitor for the dispenser of cool drinks.
